Dear Sir:

The Editors have had brought to their attention the passing of the biographe whose sketch is enclosed. They regret that the pressure on our stenographic personnel makes necessary a form letter in connection with the editorial steps which result.

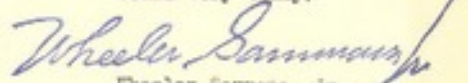

An appropriate notice will appear in our compilations and will be put on record so that later the biographe's last-published sketch may be given permanent publication in a succeeding volume of "Who Was Who." Furthermore, the last-published sketch, with date of death appended, will be printed in full in "The Supplement to Who's Who" if space limitations make possible - deaths of biographees are frequently noted in "The Supplement" as a service to the reference centers using it, but all the sketches involved cannot be reproduced in full with appropriate changes. If in this instance the sketch can be published in full in "The Supplement" with such final changes as you care to suggest, you may secure a limited number of copies of the issue containing it by checking the enclosed blank.

To the end that the sketch in "Who Was Who" - and if published in "The Supplement to Who's Who" - may be brought completely down to date and be checked finally for accuracy, would you either yourself make any appropriate notations and corrections on the enclosed copy of it, or arrange to have this done if you feel it preferable for another to so cooperate?

As "Who Was Who" becomes practically an everlasting record of biographees' lives, and "The Supplement" is filed as a permanent record in the larger libraries of the country, the importance of this final revision is obvious.

Please therefore, give attention particularly to filling in the date of the biographe's passing, as it will be added to the printed sketch. If desired, the location of interment will be appended also, if given following the date of death. The blank should, finally, be signed by whomever supplies the final record, and his or her address given. Your assistance in making this final record accurate for permanent reference is appreciated.

Yours very truly,

Wheeler Sammons, Jr.,
Associate Publisher.
